Population models in design and analysis of dose finding experiments for binary responses

Valerii Fedorov

GlaxoSmithKline

ABSTRACT

The use of quasi-linear estimators allows developing a relatively simple approach to the design of dose finding experiments. The approach is technically very similar to the design methods for population models in the linear regression setting. The main emphasis is on numerical methods for locally optimal designs